Teaching Executive Functioning in the Classroom - A four-part series

This professional development series is designed to help educators understand, recognize, and support executive functioning skills in students. Each session highlights practical strategies for building attention, organization, working memory, and self-regulation, all critical skills for both academic success and lifelong learning. From foundational understanding to classroom routines and content-specific supports in reading, writing, and math, participants will gain tools they can immediately apply to empower every learner.

Workshop Dates and Topics:

- 9-28-2026: Executive Functioning 101: What It Is & Why It Matters
- 10-26-2026: Recognizing Executive Functioning Challenges in the Classroom
- 11-16-2026: Building Executive Functioning Skills Through Daily Routines
- 12-14-2026: Supporting Executive Functioning Through Reading, Writing & Math
